ROCK AND TWO ROLLERS -- Deep in Central Australia, Lowell Thomas (left) and Director Lee Robinson discuss next move in filming the fifth edition of "High Adventure with Lowell Thomas" (in color, CBS-TV, Monday, March 24th, 8:00-9:00 p.m., EST) which deals with the hunt for the body of Harold Bell Lasseter, Australian-American explorer who was lost in 1931 while trying to relocate a fabulous gold reef in the rugged Outback country. Behind the duo is the world's largest single rock called Ayres Rock. It is 1100 feet high and over 8 miles around the base.
